01 percent, or 250. The word 'half-life' comes from the name of a well-known experiment conducted in 1938, to determine the half-life of a radioactive element, in this case P-32, a pure radioactive element with a half-life of. You may have heard of some other elements with a half-life of a few hours. How much would the number of atoms of the remaining element be after that amount of time, and how much would they be a half-life away from the original amount? One answer to this question is but there are many ways to answer this question.
